May be described as a distribution of the call. There was a yell of approval, but our ageneral stamped of volunteers, for taurus was in il humor, and his foaming mouth and blood shor eyes gave token that who wer rode him would have a ride as wild as M zeppa's, and one that might not end so well. At last a "vequ ro" named Frik see pted the chill nge, and the will tul was immediately lessued and held by a land r and torn and toot. Dism unting from his horse, the vaquero fisioned his long row lied spars securely in d a handk routed round his beat, approached the in furnated acidul, and grasping the sail in his hands, sprang tightly on it, setting the spurs deeply in its flaks as he settled securely in this seat. The britis were sheeted. The bull gave a roor of rage and terror, and fline his head to the ground; but the rider had his back to the herns and a firm grip on the tail, and k pt his seat. Another roar that shock the er und, and a wild plunge, and the now maddened bul shot seroes the sage plain with I garening spood, his pucky rider twisting the tall that to him wise steet archor until the bellowings were lost in the distance. For over a mile and a half the rice continued, smid the xeited cheers of the viquero's comrades. Occisionally the bull gave a desperate plunge to rough the heavy clump of sige in the valu attempt to did bimself of his termenter; but the loss rowels only cuon more firm y to his flicks. > A RAILROAD STORY -R. R. Rendall, of Licoto, Nab., was in Poledo a few days since, and related an incident of his first apprience in railroading in Lilinois. This was in 1845. and Mr. Randall was then a boy. The Springfield & Meredocia railroad, at present forming the oldest link in the great Wabash system, had just been built.

> One tright Sabbath moroing, while all go d little boys were at Sunday school, Mr Randal. with four o her utchies, go ne out on an explor ing expedici n in search of fresh mischief, found a flat car standing on the side track The boys, after many experiments, bit upon a plan to propal the oar.

> A strong breez) was sweeping across the prairies They abtained a piece of scapning and a sheet and raged a sail upon the car. The wind rose, the sail filled and the car moved down the track. By the time it reached the main track a good speed had been obtained, and the boy, evi ying their first trip upon the railroad, were in righ glee. The cir swapt on dawn the main trick gaining speed every moment. Houses, coro fields, gordens and prohards were passed in quick succession, but the car sped on, is velocity never slackening. The boys were of a good thing. They were getting too much but in that they failed, with the car in such > their teet. An engine whistle attracted their attention. Down the track, approaching them at full speed, was a train. The boys all jamped frem the car into the soft mud. As they sor-mbled out of the sluan and dived into the acj icing oro field; Mr. Randell says be remembers the impression of a spock, and something going up into the air behad him. Frimately, to one on the train was hurt, but the collision made a great stir in the neighborhood at the time. The boys, covered with mud, never stopped rupping until they re ched home. The e unity was secur d for the persons who wricked the train, but even to this day, now thirty x years since the occurrence, the boos have k of the record of their first ride on the Wa-bash.-N Y News.
